AUSTRALIAN CENTRE FOR INDEPENDENT JOURNALISM

Established in 1990, the Australian Centre for Independent Journalism (ACIJ) is a non-profit organisation based at the Broadway campus of the University of Technology, Sydney. The Centre is committed to supporting and developing high standards of independent journalism.

This booklet was produced through the ACIJ Photojournalism course.

Who among us do not want the ability to edit our lives as if it were a movie? Our egos and fantasies cut and paste our highs and lows so that we can identify ourselves as a hopeless romantic or the loser superhero or a Woody Allen with all our pretensions. Well... that's what I do anyway.

With photographs I'm not editing as such. It's more screen captures of my life-movie that I'd probably put in the DVD cover someday. It's storytelling with one picture at a time.

The photographs in this book represent how I see the world. How I want to tell my story. Each picture is reminiscent of something we would see in a movie, cinematic. The texture, colour, mis-en-scene and emotions. Elements to paint my own fantasy world.
